Kendall's Spavin Cure.

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

From Rev. P. N. GRANGER,

Presiding Elder of the St. Albans District,
ST. ALBANS, VT., Jan. 20, 1880.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—In reply to your letter I will say that my experience with Kendall's Spavin Cure has been very satisfactory indeed. Three or four years ago I procured a bottle of your agent, and with it, cured a horse of lameness caused by a spavin. Last season my horse became very lame and I turned him out for a few weeks when he became better, but when I put him on the road he grew worse; when I discovered that a ring-bone was forming, I procured a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and with less than a bottle cured him so that he is not lame, neither can the bunch be found. Respectfully yours,
P. N. GRANGER.

Perseverance Will Tell.

STROUGHTON, MASS., March 16, 1880.

B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—In justice to you and myself, I think I ought to let you know that I have removed two bone spavins with Kendall's Spavin Cure, one very large one, don't know how long the spavin had been there. I have owned the horse eight months. It took me four months to take the large one off and two for the small one. I have used ten bottles. The horse is entirely well, not at all stiff, and no bunch to be seen or felt. This is a wonderful medicine. It is a new thing here, but if it does for all what it has done for me it will be very great.
Respectfully yours,
CHAS. E. PARKER.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE is sure in its effects, mild in its action as it does not blister, yet it is penetrating and powerful to reach a every deep seated pain or to remove any bony growth or other enlargement, such as spavins, splints, curbs, callous, sprains, swellings, any lameness and all enlargements of the joints or limbs, or rheumatism in man and for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in its effects.

Send address for illustrated Circular which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for best results well as man.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. ALL Druggists have it or can get it for you or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Boston, Mass., U.S.A.

Do to el Drugs.

"You ask me to tell you some of the adulterations and substitutions that are made by so-called honest and unscrupulous druggists," said Mr. Malcolm, a retail pharmacist yesterday. "and I might, Yankee-like, ask you to tell me some that they don't make. There is nothing within the range of human knowledge in the way of drugs that cannot be adulterated, and there is scarcely a drug that has not a substitute that will deceive anything but a practical eye or the test of a chemical analysis. Under the present system of carrying on the business there is nothing like a fair competition. The fact is that chemical science has taken such mighty strides that the art of substituting is now as familiar to certain grades of druggists as the simplest formulas in the books. These, I hope and believe, are few and far between, and yet there are enough of them to injure the trade and the reputation of honest dealers, and to perplex and worry the physicians. Among a certain class of people, not the very poor especially, there is a rage for cheapness, of which the charlatans of the drug trade have not been slow to take advantage. With these people to be well served is to be cheaply served, and they go home chuckling to themselves when they have saved a penny or two, never thinking that perhaps there search after economy would result eventually in a loss both of money and health. Sometimes, just before I retired from business, a man would come into my office and ask: 'What would you fill this bottle with, laudanum for?' 'Seventy-five cents,' I would answer. 'Oh, I can get it filled for thirty-five cents.' I never argued the point, but let him get his laudanum as cheaply as he could. All I knew was that I could not sell it for that price. Probably he got it of less than half strength.

"My experience of drug stores leads me to believe that those which are always selling out and changing hands had better be avoided. The odds are that their stocks are never complete, and that their ability to fill even ordinary prescriptions is far below par. You remember Sawyer, late Nocemorf, in the Pickwick Papers, don't you, and the rows of empty drawers with their gilt labels? Well, there are some of that sort, I have no doubt, in this city. Young men, fresh from the schools of pharmacy, want to start in life for themselves, and most generally begin on a capital ludicrously disproportioned to their wants. A drug store is not like a grocery. It needs firmer and more elaborate fittings, and thus by the time the young man has made his shop presentable his money is so nearly exhausted that he can buy but little or no stock. Then his temptations begin. He is dealing mostly with ignorant people and seeing how easily he can impose upon them he does it persistently, and soon becomes an adept in adulteration and substitution. Meanwhile, the honest druggist in the same neighborhood suffers. To put up good drugs he must charge good prices. But he lives in spite of his cheaper fellow-tradesman, for somehow the people sooner or later discover that he sells what they call for. Then the ambitious but cheap, young druggist puts up his shutters and decamps.

"One in a while one feels like taking a bottle of citrate of magnesia, and it is a good thing if one buys it at the right place. But it is not pleasant to know that some of the druggists make it out of epsom salts, which can be bought for a mere trifle. The process is a very simple one. They dissolve the salts in water, add a little citric acid to give the necessary sour taste, and throw in the bicarbonate of potassium to produce the effervescent. There you are, a prima-article of citrate of magnesia, and I will venture to say that this decoction is daily palmed off on the public by men who would disdain to peek your pocket. I don't know that there is any tremendous profit in this preparation, for most of those who use it get it from druggists of established reputation; but I am certain that it is quite extensively made.

"One of the commonest and most profitable of the tricks practiced by the druggists is the manufacture of so-called fruit syrups from acids. Vanilla you will generally find pretty pure, for it is hard to imitate, and raspberry, strawberry, pineapple and lemon are also generally pure, although citric acid makes a very good imitation of lemon sirup. Ginger is also genuine, possibly because it is cheaper to use the root than to imitate its peculiar pungency. Orgeat and nectar are two of the most popular syrups, and yet it is safe to say that in the majority of instances they are made, not from the kernel of the bitter and sweet almond, as they should be, but from the oil of almond, which contains a considerable infusion of prussic or hydrocyanic acid. I do not say these syrups are highly injurious—in fact, I do not think they are—I only mention them to show the ease with which flavors are imitated.

"Pineapple, banana, pear, apple, strawberry and raspberry syrups can be very readily made from the artificial fruit essence, which is composed of a combination of fusil oil, sulphuric acids and acetate of potash. By varying his proportions, the clever manipulator produces the sirup he requires, and so skillful has he become that he can at will give his sirup the flavor of the bergamot or jargonelle pear, the sweet taste of the strawberry, or the slight and peculiar acid of the pineapple. There is, in fact, no end to his ingenuity.

"Digitalis, made from the foxglove," said an oculist, "is used as a heart sedative, but instead of making it by infusion of the leaves of the plant, in which the full power and freshness of the remedy are preserved, some druggists make it from the extract. This is sometimes, however, the fault of the patient, who dislikes to wait for the hour or more that the making of the infusion requires. When I have to prescribe podophyllin (the resin of the May-apple), which is used as a cathartic as well as a liver stimulant, I always write for an eighth of a grain. If I know that the patient patronizes a first-class druggist. If, on the other hand, I know that he gets his drugs from a druggist who is not strictly A1, I double the amount. The powder of podophyllin is less expensive than the resin, and not so effective, and is often substituted for it. Chlorine water, which is largely used, should have a strong odor, but it is often served without any odor at all. It should always be fresh, and I am careful in prescribing it to know who the druggist is who puts it up. More than once I have prescribed boracic acid as an astringent, but have found it to expand the pupil like atropia. I do not know what was substituted for it in these cases. I believe many druggists look upon borax as a good substitute for boracic acid.—Philadelphia Times."

—A venerable darky, seventy years old, had been claiming relationship with certain Washington families of color, and by telling them that he was rich, promising that he would remember them in his will and exhibiting to them rolls of bills, which he said, were genuine, so worked upon their susceptibilities that he borrowed money right and left and was entertained as a mascot. One day he was arrested.—Washington Post.

AYER'S
Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER." Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
Mrs. EMMA GEDNEY."

150 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effective remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE." Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."

Byhalla, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRADGON."

Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

The growing wheat in this county is said to be in bad condition. A heavy snow is needed to protect it from freezing.

The Kentucky Central has taken possession of the thirty-four miles of road recently bought from the Louisville and Nashville line and known as the Richmond branch.

The Yeoman says: Mr. Horace January, youngest son of the late Andrew M. January, has been re-elected Mayor of Maysville. He is a young man of strong character, progressive views, and of pronounced administrative ability.

The law lately enacted by the legislature of Kentucky, making it a penitentiary offense for magistrates to collect bogus fee bills in criminal cases, as is alleged to be largely the practice in some parts of this state, is being actively enforced by the grand juries.

One thing we are willing to stake our reputation upon and that is that the BULLETIN has the best paying subscribers in the state. Our books show very few delinquents, while many have paid from one to two years in advance. What other paper in the state can say as much?

In Thursday's issue we made an unintentional mistake in our notice of the trial of W. A. Stockdale. Instead of being held to bail in the sum of $100 for his appearance at the next term of the circuit court, we should have stated that the bail was taken to secure his appearance before one of the magistrates to answer to the charge of grand larceny. The examining trial is not ended, but comes up, we understand, before Squire Grant to-day.

The Paris Kentuckian says: The hop given in honor of Misses Nettie Stockton, of Richmond, Ky., and Birdie Phister, of Maysville, at the Garth Female Institute, on Friday evening last week, was a decided success, being graced with a full representation of Bourbon beauty and gallantry. The dressing and dancing were only equalled by the keen zest with which entered into the enjoyment of the hour.

THE NEAL AND CRAFT CASES.

One of Their Attorneys Interviewed in Regard to the Approaching Trial.

Louisville Commercial.

Mr. Thomas R. Browne, son of Judge George N. Browne, of Catlettsburg, and one of the attorneys for Neal and Craft, was in the city yesterday, stopping at the Fifth avenue Hotel, where he was seen by a Commercial reporter and interviewed in regard to the approaching trial at Grayson. Mr. Browne is considered one of the ablest lawyers in his section of the State, as well as a most successful one. He was engaged in the defense of his own volition, none of the other lawyers at Catlettsburg having shown a willingness to assist him except Col. R. C. Burns, who is a paid associate.

"What is the present feeling against the prisoners?" asked the reporter.

"I do not perceive any great difference from what it has always been. This animosity arises from the iron-works men at Ashland, who can increase their numbers from the surrounding towns on short notice, and make a very formidable mob at any time they wish to do so."

"Do the friends of the innocent parties who were injured in the recent fight show a disposition to be revenged?"

"No, sir; they now think the mob was responsible for that affair, and will take no hand in either fostering or aiding mob violence."

"Have you heard your father express an opinion as to whether he will or will not ask Governor Blackburn for troops at the approaching trial?"

"No, but my impression is that he will; because, if the sheriff and only a small posse start from Lexington to Grayson, they would never reach there, as Neal and Craft would be taken from them and hung without ceremony."

"If they should be convicted, will it still be necessary for the troops to guard them until the day of execution?"

"Yes, sir, because the people would not wait for that time, but hang them at the first opportunity which offered its life."

"How many militia do you think it will require to protect them during their trial?"

"Oh! five hundred well armed and equipped men can do it."

"Has there been any new evidence adduced, either for or against Neal and Craft, since their last trial?"

"None of any consequence but the people are seemingly determined that they shall hang, and nothing else will satisfy them."

"Then you think it only a matter of time for the prisoners to suffer the death penalty, with no chance of their escape from it?"

"Yes; if the law does not hang them the mob will. It is a settled fact that they must die."

West India Superstitions.

It is very unlucky to tell the name of a boat before it is launched. I recollect once when a worthy old creole, a connection of the French savant Geoffroi St. Hilaire, and who, as I hope, still owns a small island in the Grenadines, was about to launch a sloop. I asked what name he proposed to give it. He led me to where I could see a strip of canvass covering the stern, and told me it was not good to tell the name before the vessel was aloft. A calabash turned upside down in a boat is a sure forerunner of ill-luck, either in weather or fishing. The oil obtained from a shark's liver rubbed over the keel is a protection against the attack of a shark. Fish brought into a place where arrowroot or other starch is being prepared prevents a proper preparation of the starch sediment from the impurities suspended in the water used. To turn your boots upside down brings loss of money, and to open an umbrella in the house prevents your ever marrying. Never wash your hands in water which another person has used unless you first make the sign of the cross over it. When a glass cracks suddenly in a house it foretells a death and a horse stopping before a house and neighing is also a sign of death. If a cock crows in a house a stranger may be expected. In the South American colonies no good Catholic cuts a banana a cross. The fruit when so cut shows a mark which is thought to resemble a crucifix. The number of years it will take before a pine plant bears fruit depends on the number of "chops" given with the hoe before placing the plant in the ground. Black people, as a rule, before drinking pour a small quantity of the liquid on the ground. "When ben drink she lift she head to God and say: 'Tark you when man drink he drink and say nuffin'!"
